Dear Member,

One of the most positive aspects of the National Conference in Cape Town last week was the fact that the Black Sash once again raised its voice against the injustices that abound in our society and that have their root in one supreme injustice - denying to the vast majority the right to a meaningful say in the running of their country. Though some may feel discouraged because we have been saying the same things for so long with so little change resulting, nevertheless we feel that in these challenging times with so many people compromising, accepting second-best solutions in the interests of pragmatism, it is more than ever essential that the Black Sash should continue to identify itself with those who are oppressed, and continue to say NO to the oppressors. Good press coverage enabled us to make a public stand on many issues. Delegates have come away from Conference with not only ideas for areas of investigation, but also a challenge - in what way can the Black Sash be most effective in its role. Those who are judging our efforts for change are not only the Government, not only the "White" public, but the people of South Africa and the youth who will be the future rulers of South Africa.
